SUSAN B. ANTHONY

As part of her extensive campaigns across the country in support of women's suffrage, Anthony made several visits to Kansas. Her brother, abolitionist Daniel R. Anthony, published a newspaper in Leavenworth. In 1869 she co-founded the National Woman Suffrage Association. Anthony trained younger activists, who she called her "nieces." Two of them, Carrie Chapman Catt and Anna Howard Shaw, later served as presidents of the National American Woman Suffrage Association.
