

Tail

Object Card

The Plains Indians had many uses for the tail of a buffalo. Attaching the tail to a stick created a handle and made the tail more useful. When swished, the tail would keep flies and insects away from people just as it had the buffalo. It also was used as a quirt for guiding livestock and to sprinkle water onto hot rocks in the sweat lodge.

